

JOSEPH R. GRUNDY NAMED TO SENATE BY GOV. FISHER

Bristol Man to Fill Vacancy Created by Exclusion of William S. Vare

ACCEPTS APPOINTMENT

Will Be Candidate at Primary
Election to Succeed Himself, He Says

A Bristol man last night at 5.45 o'clock was named as the junior United States Senator from Pennsylvania by Governor John S. Fisher. The senator-designate is Joseph R. Grundy, who represents the second ward of Bristol in the Borough legislative body here.

Mr. Grundy has accepted the nomination with the understanding that he is to be a candidate to succeed himself at the primary election.

Mr. Grundy has been named to fill the vacancy caused by the exclusion of William S. Vare, of Philadelphia.

In accepting the appointment Mr. Grundy issued the following statement, after the announcement of his appointment had been made by Governor Fisher in his Harrisburg office:

"I have just been advised of my appointment by Governor Fisher as the junior United States Senator from Pennsylvania to fill the existing vacancy. I am pleased to accept that appointment, cognizant of the honor it conveys and the responsibilities it imposes.

"In co-operation with our senior Senator, David A. Reed, and the thirty-six members of the House from Pennsylvania, I shall give my very best efforts to the interests of the 10,000,000 people of our State, convinced that by so doing I shall be serving the interests of the country as a whole.

"I shall be a candidate for the balance of the unexpired term in the primary which occurs in Pennsylvania next May."

Electrocution Caused The Death of Philadelphia Man

Cause of death given upon the coroner's certificate for George Toland who was pronounced dead after being admitted to the Harriman Hospital here yesterday afternoon, following a fall, was "electrocution."

Toland, employed by the Vare Construction Company, which company is doing the steel construction work in readiness for the electrification of the Pennsylvania Railroad, fell from one of the steel towers, 35 feet from the ground, while working just above Edgely station.

It was stated today that Toland grabbed live wires as he fell, and his hands were badly burned as well as the right side of his chest. Upon arrival at the Harriman Hospital, where the man was taken, physicians and nurses worked hard in an endeavor to revive the man, but Toland was pronounced dead at 1.30 o'clock. When the accident occurred Toland was assisting in releasing a block under one of the wires, and he lost his hold.

Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young examined the body. The remains will be forwarded by the H. S. Rue Estate, undertakers, to the Philadelphia home of the deceased, 2417 S. Rosewood street, today, from where burial will be made. Toland was 32 years of age.

WOMAN MISSING

An urgent and personal appeal is made to all Elks to do all in their power to assist in the nation-wide search for Mrs. Beecher M. Crouse, the husband, is an esteemed member of Utica Lodge, No. 33, B. P. O. Elks, and the lodge is particularly interested in doing what it can in this trying situation.

CLOTHING GIFTS ARE ALWAYS BENEFICIAL TO THE TOTS AND MOST WELCOMED BY THE PARENTS OF THE LITTLE ONES

Including today there are only 11 shopping days to Christmas.

The anniversary of the birth of the Saviour will soon be with us, and like the wise men of old we will bear gifts not only to the Christ-child as we minister to the poor and needy, but we will commemorate the birthday of Him by remembering those whom we love and honor. We should each be careful with our selections, giving presents that are appropriate, remembering that useful ones are always appreciated.

Clothing gifts are always of benefit to the tots, and most welcomed by the parents of the little ones. At Smith's Model Shop, 412 Mill street, there is to be seen a goodly array of such. My purchase for Cousin Janet's little boy was a suit of red brushed wool, composed of leggings and jacket, with hat and mittens to match. With his dark hair and bright eyes a more suitable color could not be found. At Smith's I espied just what I've been wanting—a rose color silk pillow, in the shape of a half circle.

Suggestions in the furniture line are many at Dries' Furniture Store, Mill and Pond streets. There are so many little "accessories" as it were for the home, things that add to comfort and convenience and appearance of any house. Mr. Dries had arranged among other things in the window a set of silver candle sticks, electrically lighted, the bulbs being small and (Continued on Page Seven)

STETSON TRIAL IS NOW UNDER WAY AT CO. SEAT

John R. Watson, Prosecutor,
Is First Witness
Called

CASE STARTS TODAY

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 12.—Trial of Edward B. Stetson, judge of elections in the third ward of Bristol Borough, started here today.

The trial grew out of charges preferred against Stetson after the election held in November. Charges were preferred by John R. Watson, and were, namely:

"Wilfully, unlawfully and illegally refusing to permit a lawful entitled elector of the district to vote.

"Wilfully, unlawfully and illegally refusing to permit a qualified elector to receive a party ballot.

"Wilfully, unlawfully, and illegally refusing to allow a qualified elector to take affidavit as to his residence.

"Wilfully, unlawfully and illegally neglecting to do his duty as a judge of election."

The first and only witness called this morning was John R. Watson, Bristol druggist, and prosecutor in the case.

It had previously been stated by Watson at the time of a trial held at Bristol that he had been refused a ballot when he requested one upon arrival at the third ward polling place. The refusal, it was stated, was made by Antone Terneson, minority inspector, on the grounds that Watson was not a resident of the third ward. According to witnesses Stetson, as judge of elections, sustained the action of the minority inspector.

Mr. Watson today testified that he was born in the third ward of Bristol and had lived there all of his life. He showed tax receipts for the past several years, and stated he was registered and enrolled in the third ward.

NO DOUBT AS TO VALUE OF SCOUTING IN MINDS OF THOSE WHO WITNESSED ACTIVITIES AT DOYLESTOWN, SATURDAY

The Clean Sportsman-like Competition at County Scoutcraft Meet Was Splendid Example of Fellowship That Can Be Developed From Such Annual Competitions

No doubt can exist in the minds of anyone who had an opportunity to see the Scout activities last Saturday at Doylestown during the third annual Boy Scout day, as to the value of Scouting to the boys of the county.

The clean, sportsman-like competition in the afternoon at the county championship Scoutcraft meet was a splendid example of the fellowship that can develop from these annual competitions.

To the securing of twenty-three points, Doylestown No. 2, Scoutmaster Isaac J. Vanartsdalen, of the Salem Reformed Church, won first place; second place won by Doylestown No. 1 with twelve points; and third place by Bristol No. 2, with eleven points.

1929 champions in the various events were: Knot-tying, Edward Baumeister, South Langhorne No. 1; first aid, Trevoise No. 1 team; firefighting, Robert Sidle, Langhorne No. 1; pony back tilt, Trevoise No. 1 team; signaling, Doylestown No. 2 team; kiddy car race, Carl Leidy, Doylestown No. 2; observation, Wayne Warner, Bristol No. 2; tracking, John Welsh, Doylestown No. 1; tug-of-war, Doylestown No. 2 team; drill, Doylestown No. 2 team.

In the afternoon, at 4.30, immediately following the Scoutcraft meet an hour of movies was enjoyed at the Strand Theatre, Doylestown, consisting of Fox Movietone News, "Our Gang" comedy, "Young Hopeful" and Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. At 6 o'clock, the Doylestown Girl Scouts served cocoa to all Scouts and leaders at the Masonic Hall, through the courtesy of the Doylestown American Legion Post. Beginning shortly after 6.45 the Bucks County Council parade started under the direction of President Thomas B. Stockham, with music supplied by 1929 Camp Buccoo Bugle and Drum corp, led by James Townsend, Langhorne; the National Farm School Band, Troop No. 117, of Philadelphia, Bugle and Drum Corps, Doylestown American Legion Bugle and Drum Corps and the Doylestown Band, and troops represented from nearly all the larger communities of Bucks county.

The Bristol Exchange Club cup, presented by Walter F. Leedom, for the best appearing Scout troop was a tie between Doylestown No. 2 and Warminster No. 1. Doylestown Rotary Club Wolf Cub appearance cup was presented by Thawley Hayman to Pack No. 21 of South Langhorne No. 1. George Ross was chairman of the camp rally which immediately followed the parade, beginning with a number of stirring, enjoyable marches by the Farm School Band, songs led by Walter V. Rutherford and cheers by Mahlon Detweiler, the rally swung into its full program.

As chairman of the activities committee, Thomas Ross presented the district championship banners, individual ribbon awards from the county championship meet, individual medal awards in knot-tying, fire-lighting, observation and tracking, troop cup awards in first aid, signaling and exhibition drill. Thomas B. Stockham, president of the Bucks County Council, then presented to Doylestown No. 2, the 1929 Scoutcraft troop championship banner.

The stunts presented by the troops that had eight or more boys at camp were especially good. Among the stunts were: "The Gazook Band" of Churchville No. 1; "An Accident on the Highway," Doylestown No. 1; "It," Perkasio No. 1; "Come into the Mess Shack," Trevoise No. 1; "A Pledge of Allegiance," Doylestown No. 2; "The Circus," South Langhorne No. 1, and "Buccoo Squirrels," Chalfont No. 1. The result of the presentation of these stunts was the winning of the Bristol Rotary Camp Buccoo rally stunt cup, by Trevoise No. 1, which was presented by Minot J. Hill, of Bristol.

Camp awards were made by Scout Executive William F. Livermore, Jr., with a large list of Cubs and Scouts. Auxiliary staff letters were presented to volunteer Scout leaders who served on the staff this past summer; honorary staff letters were presented to members of the camp committee and staff letters were presented to those who had served the full season.

Major Clifton Lisle, of Paoli, presented the council feature of "The Paoli Eagle Scout European Tour and the 1929 Jamboree" in moving pictures.

The annual Christmas feed for the greatest total mileage, secured by multiplying the number present from a Scout troop by a round trip mileage to the rally, was won by Cornwells No. 1. The annual co-operative banner (Continued on Page Eight)

MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION HOLDS CHRISTMAS PARTY

Delightful Annual Affair Held in High School "Gym"
Last Night

EXCELLENT PROGRAM

The Mothers' Association of the high school held their regular monthly meeting last evening.

After the business was disposed of the meeting was turned over to the social committee, which had planned a pleasing programme, for the Christmas party, which the Mothers give annually.

In the "gym" the chairs had been arranged in a circle where the "mothers" were requested to sit, and could gaze upon a beautiful Christmas tree, trimmed with many red electric lights.

The party was started by singing the Christmas carol, "Joy to the World," followed by a short prayer. The reading, "The Night Before Christmas," was given by Mrs. Saranzack in a pleasing manner, followed by another carol, a saxophone solo by Harold Coon, a member of "Ma's Orchestra."

Then the big event of the evening was the arrival of "Santa" and his wife, with their "reindeer" and sleigh packed with bags of gifts for the "mothers" who had been good girls during the year, and for the orchestra who had helped brighten the regular meetings by their music, which they so generously gave.

After the big moment of opening their gifts, to see what Santa brought them Mrs. Santa, gave each mother a "chocolate Santa."

This annual event has a two fold meaning. It not only gives the mothers a good time but it gives them pleasure in helping to bring happiness and good cheer to many kiddies for the mothers give the gifts to the Girl Reserves, who each year stage a Christmas party to the children of the town, who, in many cases do not have much to look forward to at Christmas.

The mothers were invited into the cafeteria where they were served with fruit salad, nut bread, coffee, candy and nuts. The rest of the evening was spent socially and in dancing.

The affair will be one long to be remembered and was planned by the social committee with Mrs. Howard Coombs as chairlady. The refreshments committee was under the direction of Mrs. Jackson.

SAYS BRISTOL MAN HAD BOOTLEG PLANT

Lone Occupant Caught By State Police in Raid Is Under Arrest

WAS FULLY EQUIPPED

State police of the Morrisville barracks unearthed a large still in Middletown Township this week, locating a plant complete in all details, together with a large quantity of alcohol, several vats, sugar, coke and other quantities of raw material.

The place raided was a barn on what is commonly referred to as the William Weechie Estate, and the barn had been rented by Anthony Boholo. As yet the authorities have been unable to learn the name of the present owner.

When Corporal Dean and Privates Reynon and Keuch, of the Morrisville State Police Barracks, arrived at the farm a signal was given to someone on the place, evidently Boholo, who was in the farm-house. Then the officers saw the woman wave from one of the windows, probably in an endeavor to warn the individual that the officers were on the premises.

When the state policemen reached the barn they found Frank Gallone firing a boiler. Gallone stated at the time that he had been employed by a Bristol man, whose name he would not divulge.

The officers found an alcohol distilling plant of 500-gallon capacity in operation when they arrived. This was on the ground floor, as well as the boiler which Gallone was firing. Also on this floor were discovered a copper drum of 500-gallon capacity, full of mash. This was heated by a steam pipe from the boiler. A copper drum containing mash was connected by a copper tube six inches in diameter, which extended for a distance of about 30 feet. A copper filtering drum about four feet long and three feet in diameter was also among the equipment as well as a drum located on the second floor, measuring 2 1/2 feet in diameter and four feet in length.

Among the paraphernalia there were 47 five-gallon cans of alcohol, about 650 empty five-gallon cans; 70 bags of sugar each containing 100 pounds, 80 bags of coke.

Six concrete vats had been made under the floor of the structure. These vats, which were partially in the ground measured 15 feet square and eight feet deep.

A hearing was given Gallone before Squire Nolan at Morrisville, and he was later taken to Doylestown. He was later released on bail.

DROVE AUTO HERE WHILE DRUNK; GOES TO JAIL

Edward Bleakney Sentenced
To Six Months in The County Prison

HIS SECOND OFFENSE

Newtown Township Road
Supervisors Before Court
For Bad Road

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 12.—For operating his automobile in Bristol while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, Edward Bleakney was sentenced to six months in the county prison yesterday by Judge Hiram H. Keller. This is the second time that Bleakney was arrested on the same charge.

Charged with maintaining a nuisance as road supervisors of Newtown township, Alexander Chambers and Charles E. Shuster went on trial late yesterday afternoon before Judge Hiram H. Keller. Charles C. Willis, the third supervisor, is ill and could not be present as a defendant in the case.

The Commonwealth, represented by private counsel, Thomas Ross, of Doylestown, charges that the road supervisors have failed to properly maintain the Richboro Road between Newtown and Richboro by the way of Spring Garden bridge. The prosecutor named in the bill of indictment is Roland Porter, manager of the Neshaminy Farms of J. Wharton Sinkler, located on the highway in question.

Howard I. James, of Bristol, is counsel for the road supervisors. A large number of witnesses will be called by the Commonwealth, including prominent physicians and other residents of the Newtown section. The defense too has many witnesses.

Dr. George A. Parker, of Newtown, was the first witness called by the Commonwealth.

"The Richboro Road is filled with holes from one to six inches deep from one side to the other and from one end to the other," Dr. Parker testified in chief. I have not been able to use the road in safety over 20 miles an hour for some time and I use the road four or five days a week. I broke an automobile spring on this road last summer and have damaged many tires as a result of the holes in this highway. The Richboro Road is the worst road in this vicinity, I am sure, for I use all of them. It is impossible to drive over the highway at 45 miles an hour."

"What you want is a concrete highway instead of the present road, is it not?" asked Mr. James.

"I never said I wanted the road to be concreted," Dr. Parker answered.

"Yet in spite of that you bring your own neighbors, the supervisors of the township into court over this affair," Mr. James continued.

"I did not bring them into court," the doctor answered. "All I want is a safe road. Stone was dumped on the highway some time ago and no binder placed on top and in a short time the stone had all slipped back into the side gutters."

The road in question is of Telford construction. The stones were originally placed on end and top dressing applied. It is alleged by the Commonwealth that the top dressing has worn off leaving a surface of holes over the entire stretch. Merchants of Newtown claim they have lost business as a result of the condition of the highway. They will testify in the case, as well as an official of the Keystone Automobile Club who recently made an inspection of the highway.

Dr. Parker testified that late this fall a man tried to sell him a large automobile and asked for "a rough road" to try out the riding qualities. "When I took the car over the Richboro Road and stepped on the 'gas' the car went into the gutter," Dr. Parker said.

James L. McCarvey, of Philadelphia, a truck driver, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Keller to a charge of driving a car while drunk on May 27 this year near Bristol. He was fined $200 and costs.

CONGRESS

The seventy-first congress is on trial. It may almost be said that congress as an American institution is on trial.

The impression is becoming pretty general that in recent years congress has deteriorated; that it is not what it used to be; that the caliber of most of the members is not as high as it was in former years; that the things it does are frequently, too frequently, foolish and ill-advised; that the things it omits to do are necessary and important. Worst of all, there is a growing feeling that this body, gradually failing as a legislature for this great country, is usurping an importance that under the constitution it does not possess.

We have seen congress involved in interminable disputes that took time from important legislation. We have seen it tangle itself in its own rules so that the final hour has struck without action on important measures. We have seen federal employees remain unpaid for weeks and months because necessary appropriation bills have not been passed. No one can read the official report of the proceedings of congress without being struck by the amount of time wasted in frivolous discussion to the neglect of the nation's vitally important business.

But that is not all. Since 1920 four congresses have been in session. Each one of them has refused to obey the plain mandate of the constitution to redistrict the house of representatives in accordance with the federal census. Never before has congress dared take such an attitude. This one fact speaks in language all can hear, the deterioration of congress, and its usurpation of power in disregard of the fundamental law of the land.

The number of people who hold congress in contempt is growing. It is evidenced by the fact that it is becoming harder and harder to secure candidates who can rally the support of the best minds of the community. Too often a congressional election is a choice between two evils. This, of course, is partly the fault of the community itself which has grown careless of its national representation, and supinely lets the office go to the most blatant self-seeker. But it is also the fault of congress, which has made itself a body to which efficient men too often feel it is no honor to belong.

The seventy-first congress has now begun to make history. It can add to the decline of congress in popular esteem by following in the footsteps of its immediate predecessors. Or it can turn about, do its work quickly and efficiently, and restore itself to honor by showing that it is subservient to law. It can do this in no other way more surely than by insisting that the house be reapportioned, and by framing some scheme of reapportionment that will make such a scandal as has characterized the last four congresses impossible forever in the future.

"IS EVERYBODY HAPPY?"

By ELEANORE CAREY

Copyright 1929 Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
This novel is based on the Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring Ted Lewis

SYNOPSIS
Forced to pawn the violin given to him by his father, the eminent violinist and conductor, Victor Volmar, by the Austrian Emperor, Ted Todd (as he chooses to be known in New York) pays the rent and buys a jazzophone so he may learn to play jazz and get the job promised him by Mr. Abrams, theatrical producer. Abrams gets him a position in a Hungarian cafe where he opens on the night his parents go to hear him playing the violin in the New York Symphony Orchestra. His parents, stopping at the cafe, find their son playing the hated jazz, and Volmar disowns Ted, despite his mother's protests.

INSTALLMENT XIV

Before the call board of a cheap vaudeville theatre two performers stood marking down the hours of their appearance. Ted looked at his fellow performer and smiled, saying, "I'm glad that board isn't any longer." His schedule was as follows:—

- 11 A. M.—Ted Todd and his band. (Other acts)
- 2 P. M.—Ted Todd and his band. (Other acts)
- 5 P. M.—Ted Todd and his band. (Other acts)
- 9 P. M.—Ted Todd and his band. (Other acts)
- 11 P. M.—Ted Todd and his band. (Other acts)

He glanced once more at the list on the board and realized he was the first and the last act on the bill. Going into the theatre lobby

"I have always loved you, Ted," he saw a large sign, which read, "The Rivoli Theatre—3 shows daily."

In high spirits Ted left the theatre lobby and walked in a sprightly manner to the pawnbroker's office. The old man behind the counter peered suspiciously over his glasses as Ted took several bills from a goodly sized roll and passed them over the counter with a ticket. The violin safely in his hands once more he made a hurried exit, the gratitude in his heart, and a black cloud lifted from his mind.

Several months later the electric sign on one of the prominent corners read, "Grand Opening of Ritz Revue—Featuring Ted Todd and His Band."

The theatre was packed. In a box sat Mrs. Molnar, dressed in a beautiful — but simple — evening gown, anxiously awaiting her son's appearance. Her face, more than ever, revealed her kindly sweetness—and of late that sweetness seemed to have become exaggerated. New lines had made themselves evident, but she was sure, and there was a definite haggard look, as if she had worried considerably.

On the stage Lena, the center of a levy of chorus girls in filmy gauzy clothes, was singing and dancing. There was no denying it—Lena could dance, and Gail and Mr. Abrams, in the wings, watched the performance intently.

"She's marvelous! Ted is surely fortunate in having her in his act, but do you think Ted's act is strong enough to hold up on a bill like this?"

"Most certainly, my dear Gail," said Mr. Abrams, who took the credit for Ted's success much to himself, and in his selfishness waxed jovial and understanding and benevolent. "He's got something none of the rest of them have—for one thing he has a splendid manager!"

Lena finished her song and dance with the girls and left the spotlight as the audience acclaimed her roundly. She went to the door of Ted's dressing room and knocked boldly. Ted was seated before his mirror making up for his act when the door opened and Lena walked in—still in her stage costume. She closed the door as Ted stood up, and rather embarrassedly said, "Oh hello, Lena, how did the dance go?" He walked slowly to the door Lena had closed and opened it. "It's hot in here," he said by way of explanation.

Lena, with determination in her eyes, walked toward Ted, and shutting the door as she passed, said, "There is something I have been wanting to say to you, pri vately, for a long time, Ted. In the first place I am awfully sorry for the way I acted when you just ar rived, and I cannot forget our past affair. This being together recalls too many happy memories, and a happy memory is about all the hap piness I get out of life."

"But Lena, you must forget!" Ted was apparently nervous. This was the thing he had been afraid of and had tried so hard to avoid. "I've always loved you, Ted, ever since we were children together. See, here is the engagement ring you gave me, and I have found the sweetest little wedding ring. Don't let our whole life go on—wasting days, weeks, months and years, without belonging to each other. Just put your arms around me, Ted dear, please, and I'll show you how much I love you!"

Gail had been standing talking with Mr. Abrams when Lena dashed her act, and realizing how little time Ted had, she volunteered to go make sure he was ready. She stood outside his dressing room door, hand raised ready to knock, when she heard her name men tioned and Lena's strident voice coming from the room. She heard Lena's protestation of love to Ted, and hearing no answer from him, she imagined Ted found it accept able to him. She could not see the negative nodding of his head nor his apparent disgust with the girl as he tried to evade her amorous declarations. All Gail heard was Lena, and for Gail that was more than enough. She recoiled with horror, as if someone had slapped her face with some unclean thing. Then as she tried to move away from in front of that horrible place, his dressing room, she swayed and it seemed she must faint. The thought ran through her mind that she might faint "dead away" and then she would be discovered—but fainting loomed as a happy prospect. It meant oblivion from this terrible feeling in her heart. She would welcome it! Glad for the few minutes of unconsciousness, but to some people fainting never comes—even though they face cir cumstances and situations which are unbearable, and when to lose consciousness for a short time might almost save their reason.

So Ted and Lena were lovers? It was unthinkable, but apparently it was true. Surely it was no trick of her imagination—those words in Lena's voice she heard emanating from the room. She wasn't given to such imaginings, and the last thing she would even imagine would be any infidelity on Ted's part. Such a thought had never entered her mind. She had never experienced jealousy.

But she had heard! She wished she could say it was imagination or a hideous nightmare, but there was no mistaking the harsh voice of Lena's, and the silence of Ted. If Gail had only stayed by that door for just a few moments longer, she could have saved herself and Ted such a long period of unnecessary unhappiness. Oh why had she gone to his door just at the most in opportune of moments? Better blissful ignorance than this! Any thing—but this death-weight around her heart, squeezing its blood until life should be lost!

And back in Ted's dressing room another struggle was taking place. Lena would not believe that Ted would remain so unapproachable, particularly when she, Lena, made such an appeal. When she asked Ted to put his arms around her, he looked at her in amazement, at the cool deliberate way in which she plainly tried to entice him. Then the feeling of repulsion he had for this girl became too great for him to bear and he shouted at her.

"Why, you don't care anything about me, Lena. When I was no body, you had no time for me. You were annoyed if I made an effort to see you, much less speak of our childhood affair. I'll never forget my feelings when I first learned you true character. So now, now that it looks as if I had a chance to be somebody you are crawling back! No, Lena, please get this straight—I am in love with Miss Wilson and nothing can change that."

Lena had thought, he couldn't re fuse her! She played her trump card and lost. For the first time in her life Ted offered her self (if necessary) to let her bring the man about. She had always felt certain that when the time came when she should wait Ted back again, she need only be a bit tactful in the manner of letting him know about it. But here she had literally thrown herself at him, and he had been very definite in turning her down.

No other man had ever done that—and far more important men than he had made advances to her for her love, and she had scorned them. "I'll show him!" Lena thought to herself as she looked at Ted through eyes that had be come more slits in her face. "He'll be 'crawling back' again to me!" (To be continued)

Nicholas Hennessy, Bristol, charged with operating an automobile after revocation of license, pleaded guilty yesterday and was discharged by Judge Keller upon payment of costs.

Martin E. Deshler, former chief of police of Doylestown, and former member of the State Highway Patrol, was acquitted yesterday by a jury after Judge Keller had directed them to return a verdict of not guilty on charges of larceny of $25 and impersonating an officer. The Court ruled the Commonwealth did not have evidence to sustain a conviction of larceny.

George Schwartz, thirty-two, of Pittsburgh, by telling the truth in criminal court here yesterday escaped a prison sentence. He told Judge Keller that he was engaged in bootlegging and admitted hauling alcohol from Newark to Pittsburgh when arrested near Lincoln Point Restaurant on the Lincoln Highway on Nov. 9 this year. He was fined $300 and costs and a prison sentence of two months was suspended and Schwartz placed on probation for a year. He told the Court that he needed money and took a job for $50 a week in the bootlegging business.

Scouting Is An Inspiration To The Community

By Campaign Executive Committee

Clarence J. Buckman, Chairman

Scouting is America's program for boy development. Scouting is out-door life, and promotes health, strength, happiness and practical education. Scouting builds character through the daily good turn; citizenship through service; health through out-door fun. Scouting is the community's opportunity to reach the boy for good citizenship. The scout program reaches every element of the boy life, regardless of race, creed, class or condition.

In nearly three years since Bucks County Council of Boy Scouts of America has been organized, the Scouting movement in our county has grown from thirteen troops to thirty-eight troops and eleven cub-packs, from 231 Scouts to 872 Scouts and 93 Cubs. Undoubtedly there will be in a few years at least seventy-five troops and packs, with as many as 1250 boys in the membership.

Scouting is a tremendous asset. Our county deserves the benefits which a program of expansion will produce. It is time now to promote such a program. Many of our communities want new troops, but we must have an increased staff and budget to organize and supervise them, as well as to continue our present work.

Camping Is the Heart of Scouting

A very important part of the splendid program of the Boy Scouts of America is camping. The Scouts who receive intensive training at the supervised and organized camp are the backbone and leaders of the weekly programs in the troop meetings. The number of Scouts who go to camp every year runs into hundreds of thousands.

The Bucks County Scout camp is a healthy, going concern. The purpose of the camp is intensive development of character, citizenship, health and self-reliance, in surroundings that enable men to help boys. It combines the advantages and equipment of a high grade camp for all boys, both the well-to-do and the poor lads, with the wonderful values of real Scout Training.

An adequate mess hall and kitchen, additional living quarters for the year around, the debt on previous equipment which must be paid off—these and other improvements help to make necessary a new vision and a campaign for funds. The camp is a community project. Increasingly it is being used by Scouts from every part of the county, every week in the year.

One Campaign Provides for Two Years

We should back up our boys and give them the same support that has been given by other communities. A dignified, county wide, comprehensive campaign is now on, to secure funds for a budget large enough to provide two assistant executives for the north and south ends of the county, as well as to furnish badly needed camp improvements. This campaign should and will have the enthusiastic support of all good citizens of the county.

The present need of our Council is for $53,000 to be spent as follows, with no more campaigns for two years:

Council Maintenance 1930-1931	$33,000
(A minimum provision for supervision, administration, extension, leadership training, and necessary supplies)
Camp Improvement	$20,000
(Completion of payment for previous equipment, a mess hall and kitchen, living quarters, etc.)

It is planned to raise the goal of $53,000 before December 15th. The county has been divided into areas and sections, with a quota for each, and with prospective sectional organizations for solicitation. There will be an extensive program of publicity. Although all citizens will be afforded an opportunity to give, many large and generous advance subscriptions will be necessary to give the effort the proper impetus.

Let us go forward with faith and optimism to the end that the Boys may be served and that our communities shall be proud of their support of Scouting.

Scenery and Settings Here for Popular Comedy

The scenery and stage settings especially designed and built for the popular comedy, "Meet the Wife," were brought to Bristol last evening, and erected in St. Mark's auditorium under the personal supervision of John Quale, the stage manager, who, from his long experience in that line of work, is considered one of the most successful stage managers in Philadelphia.

The scenes are laid around the suburban residence of "Gertrude Lennox," the principal character in the play, whose activities are not confined to those of a social and literary nature, but to art as well. The interior decorations of "Liberty Hall," as she calls it, are of the futuristic type, and Mr. Lennox, a real estate operator, but whose secret ambition is to be a great architect, is quite content to give Mrs. Lennox all the "credit" for the ideas embodied in their residence.

He is very careful, however, that any criticisms are not made in his wife's presence, as that very capable lady not only claims to be the "captain of her soul," but tries to and generally succeeds in dominating everything and everybody with whom she comes in contact.

The highly entertaining comedy should keep the local audience roaring with laughter from start to finish, as it is filled with amusing dialogue and climaxes and when produced by the Ascension Dramatic Society is in the hands of a veteran organization which has produced this and other plays in a very successful manner, not only in Philadelphia audiences, but in a territory that takes them a considerable distance from home.

YARDLEY HISTORY IS INTERESTING ONE

Pioneer Settler Was William
Yardley Who Emigrated
From England

HAD 500 ACRES OF LAND

YARDLEY, Dec. 12—In tracing back the history of this town one finds that the pioneer settler was William Yardley (as spelled then), who with his wife, Jane, and three sons, Enoch, William and Thomas, and a servant, Andrew Heath, emigrated from Ransclough, near Leake, in the County of Stafford, England, and arrived in the River Delaware in the good ship "Friends Adventure" July 29, 1682.

They located on 500 acres of land purchased of William Penn, for the sum of 10 pounds, on March 30, 1681 (just 10 days after Penn received the grant of Pennsylvania from Charles II.) This deed has been wonderfully preserved and is now in the possession of Augustus J. Cadwallader, who is a direct descendant from the Yardleys of England. This tract was located on the Delaware River at the present site of the borough of Yardley and was called "Prospect Farm."

William Yardley, who was 50 years of age when he came to Bucks County, built a stone house on the tract and this was the first house in this section. During 1702 and 1703 there was an epidemic of smallpox in this locality and Yardley and his entire family died of the dread disease, and his real estate in Bucks County descended to his brother, Thomas, of "The Beeches," in Staffordshire.

In 1704 Thomas Yardley, Jr., a nephew of William, came to Bucks County with a power of attorney from his father, to claim "Prospect Farm." It was here that he married Ann Biles, and their ten children thus became the ancestors of the many residents of the community. The original house, as built by William Yardley was burned about 1800, but was later rebuilt and is now owned by J. C. McCormick, who operates a large commercial duck farm here.

Yardleyville, on the Delaware at the site of Thomas Yardley's ferry, now incorporated into a borough named Yardley, began to develop into a village about 1807. An old map of the place of that date shows a number of building lots and streets laid out. The only buildings, however, were the old tavern "White Swan" near the river bank, and the dwellings of Brown, Pidcock, Eastburn and Depue. The ferry crossed the river opposite the home of "Jolly Longshore," which is today "Lanrick Manor." The house has been constructed of beautifully hand-wrought woodwork and put together with pegs instead of nails. This is standing today and is wonderfully preserved.

The first storehouse in the place was built by the widow of Thomas Yardley, known as "Wheat Sheaf," because there was a sheaf of wheat cast in the iron railing in front of the second-story of the house.

In 1831 a canal was built through the center of the village, and Charles Shoemaker was the first locktender. In 1893 a county bridge was built over this canal at the foot of what is now College avenue.

The post office was established in 1828, with Mahlon Dugan as the first postmaster.

Education was received from Old Exford School, but in the course of time an eccentric man, one Brelsford, a famous deer hunter of this section, built an eight square on the site of the present Oak Grove Schoolhouse, on a lot left by Thomas Yardley for school purposes.

The population of the settlement had so increased that in 1880 the census showed 820 residents.

In 1889-90 the Yardley National Bank was organized with a capital of $50,000 and opened its doors on January 20, 1890. In 1895 the town was incorporated as a borough under the name of Yardley, and the same year the streets were lighted by naphtha lamps, which were replaced the following year by electric lights.

In 1827 the Episcopal Church was built and was replaced by the present structure in 1876.

Today Yardley has so developed that the population has reached 1,500, and has within its limits a bleachery, a power plant, a flour mill and a refrigerator plant, not to mention various businesses and a splendid school with a staff of 11 teachers and 313 pupils.

The Yardley National Bank is still conducted in the original structure, but a committee has been appointed and plans are well under way for a new bank building of the most modern type to be erected on the main intersection of the borough in the near future.

The town is the proud supporter of an efficient volunteer fire department, a free library and a community visiting nurse, and is up to date in every way.

Adjoining the borough on the South is one of the oldest if not the oldest graveyards in the United States. This was given to the Falls Monthly Meeting of Friends on June 4, 1690, by Thomas Janney, just previous to his return to England, where he died in 1692. In this burying ground are a number of brownstone gravestones, one of them 27 inches high, 18 inches wide and six inches thick, dated 1692, bears the inscription, "Here lies the body of Joseph Sharp, son of Christopher Sharp." There are a number of stones in this cemetery more than 200 years old.

"OFF YEAR" SAW POLITICAL EVENTS OF IMPORTANCE

By George R. Holmes

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The year 1929 quite probably will be set down by the historians as an off-year politically, yet it was in many ways an interesting political period and a significant one.

It witnessed the death of the Coolidge administration and the birth of the Hoover administration, with all of the great political changes that accompany a transition of executive power. They came and went in high places in 1929.

Probably more significant the year has seen the Democrats, beaten, dispirited and disorganized at the start, begin the staging of a come-back, the full extent of which cannot properly be appraised or weighed until put on the scales of the 1930 elections.

Democratic Despair

The Democrats faced 1929 in the lowest depths of despair, having lost the Presidential election by crushing figures, and, what was worse, emerging from that contest with the party split wider than it ever had been before. They face 1930 with their wounds rapidly healing, and with a feeling of militant hope and confidence.

In many respects the Republicans fared worse in 1929 than did the Democrats, despite the Republicans' continuance in power. For 1929 saw the cleavage between the Republican East and the Republican West appreciably widened over the savage tariff contest, and as the year closed the Republicans were doing about as much worrying over a party split as were their Jeffersonian adversaries.

Republican Senators from the big Industrial states of the East were calling their Republican brethren from the prairie states of the West "sons of the wild jackass," "pseudo-Republicans," "mavericks," "mugwumps" and similar pet names. The westerners were retaliating by coalescing with the Democratic minority in Congress to rout the Republican regulars all down the line on tariff rates. The feeling between the Republican factions was somewhat bitter as 1929 breathed its last, and it threatened to intrude itself into next year's Congressional elections.

South Breaks Away

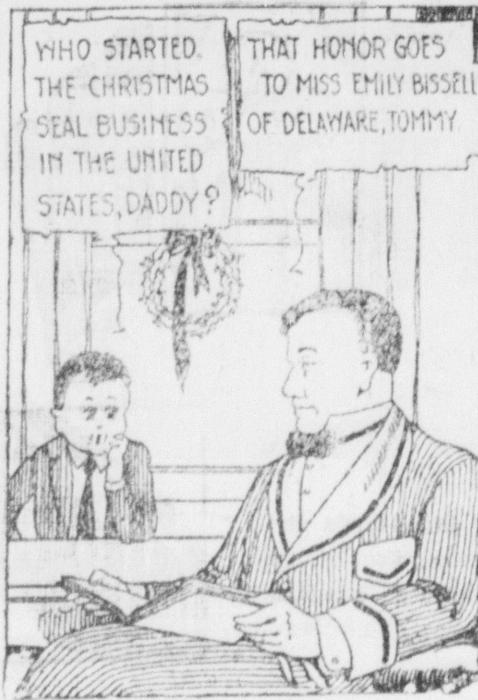

The Democrats undeniably started the year in bad shape from the crushing defeat suffered by the national ticket in November, 1928.

The South was broken and rebellious against continuance of the Smith-Raskob leadership. Recognizing the situation, but steadfastly refusing to retire under fire, Chairman Raskob, turned active management of party affairs over to an executive committee, at the head of which he placed Jonett Shouse, former member of Congress from Kansas, a Kentuckian by birth, a Protestant, and one of McAdoo's old lieutenants.

Shouse came to Washington early in the summer and set up permanent Democratic headquarters—something the party had never before had, and began a quiet and effective campaign to bring back into the party those elements which deserted it during the bitter '28 campaign. Although Raskob retained the titular chairmanship, Shouse became to all intents and purposes the real chairman of the party, and from his headquarters in Washington for the balance of the year there emanated lasty blows at the party in power, and adroit moves to restore Republican harmony.

Virginia A Go!

The test of Democratic success was staked on the Virginia state election in November. The party in Virginia split wide open in the Smith campaign, and for the first time since reconstruction days Virginia had gone Republican, Hoover carrying it by 25,000. The Democratic boaters adiosed with the Republicans in a state convention during the summer, under the leadership of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and sought to hold the state against the regular Democratic organization which had supported Smith.

There were anxious moments at Democratic headquarters during the bitter state campaign that followed. Could the 50,000 Democrats who bolted Smith be enticed back to the party? That was the question.

The Old Dominion voters answered it themselves on Nov. 7 by administering a sound licking to the Cannon coalition, and the regular Democratic state, headed by John Garland Pollard, for Governor, carried the state by 60,000—an almost unprecedented majority. The boaters all came back.

Hopes In Rise

Up went Democratic hopes and spirits from that moment, for it was felt that Virginia was typical of other southern states which bolted Smith—Texas, Florida, and North Carolina, and that at the first opportunity they will return to the fold. The big Democratic fear so widely entertained that the Solid South was broken irrevocably for the Democrats has largely evaporated since the Virginia test. They are confident again. Whether they are rightly so remains to be seen.

The Democrats managed to extract some satisfaction, too, from other scattering elections during year. In a Kentucky Congressional election, a Republican who rode in on the crest of the Hoover wave, and who died, was replaced by a Democrat in a special election. The Democrats in November managed to win most of their important Mayoralty contests.

Republican leaders did not attach much significance to the November elections, although they had professed to have some hopes of retaining Virginia. For the most part they declared the results were merely the back-swing of the pendulum—it having gone so far to their side in '28 that it must of necessity swing back somewhat in '29.

Concern About Senate

Their own split in the Senate gave them more concern. For when Republican Senators get to calling each other names in public and voting with the Democrats whenever they choose it indicates a pretty serious condition of party affairs. Some of the more pessimistic were even comparing the situation to the Bull Moose split of 1912. Such talk, however, was generally considered extravagant.

But the fact remained that as the year closed there were three distinct Republican groups operating in Congress, or rather in the Senate: (1) the group of powerful Eastern conservatives who have dictated party affairs for a long time, (2) the insurgents from the agricultural west, and (3) the so-called "new guard" composed for the most part of new Senators who came in on the Hoover wave, and who are sympathetic neither with the "old guard," as represented by Reed or Pennsylvania, and Moses of New Hampshire, nor with the "insurgents," as represented by Norris of Nebraska and LaFollette of Wisconsin.

has managed to keep himself generally aloof from the party squabbles. Both the "old guard" and the "new guard" claim to represent his wishes in the tariff, and to some extent so do the insurgents, as well. Mr. Hoover said nothing—and said it eloquently.

The President's principal move during the year, in a strictly organization sense, was to change chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Haston Is Named

Dr. Hubert Work, who conducted his campaign, retired in September and was replaced by Claudis H. Huston, a Tennessee manufacturer, who had served under Mr. Hoover as an assistant Secretary of Commerce, and who managed a great deal of the Hoover pre-convention campaign. He was the President's personal choice for the Committee chairmanship.

A number of well-known political figures passed away during the year. Among them was Senator Francis E. Warren (R) of Wyoming, the dean of the Senate, who served in Congress for some 36 years and the last of the Union army veterans there. Another was Senator Theodore E. Burton (R) of Ohio, long a party leader, and several times an aspirant for the Presidential nomination of his party. Still another was James W. Good, ex-Congressman from Iowa, whom President Hoover appointed to his Cabinet as Secretary of War in recognition of political services well performed.

Buy, Build and Live in Bristol

Tuning in on the Talkies

WHEN "The First Auto," on its first trip, ran a mile within an hour, 86 kids advised its driver to get a horse. In those days autos frightened horses. Now horse take fright at the sight of another horse.

"The Price of Success" is sometimes figured on the basis of a fall wre.

"Singin' in the Bathtub" is not the theme song of "The Saturday Night Kid." It is Winnie Lightner's contribution to "Show of Shows."

Joan Bennett, daughter of Richard Bennett, star of "The Home Towners," has followed her father into Warner Bros. pictures. She is leading a woman for George Arliss in "Disraeli."

"Obey Your Husband" is the title of a dumb picture, made in other days.

When "The Big Butter and Egg Man" falls victim to "Gold Diggers of Broadway" sympathy retires to the side lines.

"The Divine Lady" need not of necessity be a minister's wife.

"The Isle of Escape" is that home base in the middle of the street where leaping pedestrians are supposed to be safe.

"Man's Plaything" is that mechanical toy Dad has arranged with Santa Claus to bring to "Sonny Roy."

Improving the Si language "Consider yourself a package and come in by the back door" is a nifty in the dialog of "So Long Letty."

For "Double Feature" Day "It's the Old Army Game" "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em"

pointed. This solved another problem, and I was enthusiastic about the pair from the moment I saw them. There is a dandy place in Aunt Mary's home for these, and I know they will just suit her.

Singer Brothers is another one of the many stores that offer suitable gifts for men. A belt of brown leather which is there on display has a neat silver buckle. And such quality in Singer Brothers' goods! Then too for the cousins one wishes to remember

"I WAS AMAZED AT QUICK RELIEF KONJOLA GAVE"

New Medicine is Praised by Lebanon Lady Who Had Health Troubles For Five Years

MRS. ROY T. BARLETT

"I was amazed at the quick relief Konjola gave me," said Mrs. Roy T. Barlett, 37 Hoffman street, Lebanon, Pa. "I had suffered for five years with stomach trouble. I had no appetite and it seemed that the slightest morsel of food would cause gas to form. I was subject to frightful headaches. I had rheumatism in my hands and feet, which would swell, causing agonizing pains. My nerves became jerky. I was unable to do my housework without assistance."

"After three bottles of Konjola I am grateful to state that I am wonderfully improved in health. My stomach trouble has gone. My nerves are better. My rheumatic pains and the swelling have disappeared entirely and my eating and sleeping is practically normal. I feel much stronger and better."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

Give a Stocking That Will Last

In every GOTHAM stocking, just below the garter hem, is the famous GOLD STRIPE. This is garter-run insurance, even in the sheerest stockings. It says, as plainly as you please: "NO RUN THAT STARTS ABOVE, CAN PASS THE GOLD STRIPE"—and it is a good thing to remember when you buy a fine gift.

with just small but useful gifts there are to be had socks of silk, cotton, and silk and wool. Some have neat clocks at the sides, and all are in attractive colorings. For the automobile driver (there is suggested at Singer's, fur-lined gloves, these being shown in curious styles.

When one enters the jewelry store of Freeman Baylies, Mill street, it seems as though the rubbing of Alladin's lamp had placed gems of every description before one. I could hardly get my mind from the lovely rings with their gorgeous stones. Shifting my eyes to the bracelets I finally selected one of white gold with fligree work, set with sapphires. I can hardly wait until Christmas morning when I'll be able to present this to Nancy.

And secretly I wish someone would give me one similar.

For the lover of birds Barney's Hardware Store, at 303 Mill street, offers a variety of bird cages with stands. There are many hues, but the one I liked best is the buff-colored one shown in the display window, with black trim. A silk tassel adds to the attractiveness. Doll dishes of green, white and black caught my eye in this window, too, and I was not satisfied until I went in and ordered a set saved for Jennie's little girl.

It just seems as if shopping is easier than ever this year. So many of the stores are delivering the larger purchases, and then the variety is larger than ever. The quality is just as splendid as ever. And what more could I or other shoppers ask for?
